“ Grandma, I love you and will miss you dearly. You have taught me so many things such as how to be a mother. And it's okay to be a woman with sass ! I will cherish every memory we have made together . Know that I will try and live up to your image and be even half the woman you were. Thank you for being my rock through all the storms. I love you Grandma. Love Heather

I dreamed of you last night. I was outside on a beautiful spring day. I was in a park. There were trees everywhere. Birds singing. Somewhere, I could hear a babbling brook. Then all the sudden...I heard the sound of a woman in high heeled shoes walking on concrete. I started looking for her! That's when I came to a HUGE transparent wall. It went up as far as the eye could see! On the other side was a BEAUTIFUL ABSOLUTELY BREATHTAKINGLY GORGEOUS woman walking along a sidewalk with a red purse, red shoes, red sunglasses and red lipstick on. She has a wonderful white fiftys looking dress on. It was YOU! I always heard how beautiful you were when you were young...but you were HOT!! WOW!! I was so happy to see you!! I knocked on the wall! But it made no sound!! I knocked louder! Nothing!! I used both hands to bang on it. But to no avail. So I put my forehead softly on the glass. I leaned there a moment. Softly crying. As I looked up from that place. There you were. IN ALL YOUR GLORY. Face to face we looked at each other thru the glass. But I knew that even though you knew I was there you couldn't see me!! But you let me see you! For a moment we were together again. And then...when I was resigning myself to the fact that you couldn't see me....THEN YOUR EYES MADE CONTACT WITH MINE!! You did see me now!! You were laughing!! You were crying too!! You said my name!! Shannon?? Shannon!! You looked for a way over the glass wall. There was only one way over....and you had already made that journey. I don't think you could hear me but I said Gram....I TOLD YOU I WOULD SEE YOU AGAIN!! AND When my work is done....I'll be standing next to you!! I promise. You smiled at me. We put our hands up to the glass. One of us an Angel. One of us just a human in awe of God's beautiful...achingly gorgeous creation.
