“Rain, I have written, and re-written this so many times. I'm still not sure that this is perfect. There are just no simple words to describe how amazing you are. I came to find out that Rain represents emotional relief and happiness, and that is how we feel whenever you were nearby. You brought that gift everywhere you went, touching and impacting more people than you will ever know. Your smile lit up a room, and your laugh was so contagious, it was exactly the perfect medication to treat depression. I miss our late night talks and the deep conversations about the meaning of life, our futures, our hopes, and dreams, all though it seems no more than a fairy tale now. You never missed an opportunity to help someone out, even if you have to drop everything. You brought families together and although your gone, it is not over. You always said you wanted to become a veteran and fight in the war. Do you know why veterans are honored? It is because they put their life on the line, risking everything they have and they never looked back. They are selfless. You are selfless. Along with the memories of all the fearless men who fought in the war, you will also be remembered. We had little idea of the huge series of events going on that no one had known anything about. You saved lives. It is strange how it all took place. You got hit directly across Veteran's park, and your organs saved wounded veterans. You did what you have always wanted, and those soldiers are forever grateful. People say that you are in a better place. Yes, I know it is true, but it doesn't make it hurt any less. Why is death so crippling? I have no scientific explanation or professional answer, All I know is this: Our body is a shell. When we look at each other, that's what we see. We are not attached to our bodies, they are not permanent. our spirits are. Her body may be gone, but her spirit lives on.

I miss you, I will be there soon, I promise. <3 , Cecily Blankenship

“ Hello, My names Michael Ray. I just found out today that Rain had died from one of my good friends. I did not believe him so I searched around trying to figure it out. Took me 45 minutes. Me and rain were never really close but we went to the same school in 7th grade in Austin Texas. When we were in a Skype call and added all of our friends from Austin she told me she was happier then ever to be able to talk to us since its been a few months after she moved. We sadly stopped talking for a few months and then I heard news about her now... I wish I could have found out sooner. I wish to tell you that she did enjoy her stay in Austin and that people over here care about her.

“ I am honored to have gotten the chance to have loved such a beautiful being! Such incredible traits, talents, and spirit wrapped up in such a young girl! If you stopped and listened well enough you could learn a lot from her.

I love something I saw on her Facebook page that says something like "This is me. I am who I am and that's good enough." That's SO true! She was unapologetically true to herself!

At one particular sleepover she had at my house we had just had my oldest two girls birthday parties. I remember thinking, "Wow! We have so much food left over! We'll be eating these for days!!!" Cecily and Rain were watching a movie when Rain went into the kitchen and started rummaging through our fridge. When she re-emerged she had a plate piled high with about 8 hotdogs, loads of chips, and ALL the rest of the pint of macaroni salad. I had never seen one person eat that much food before! I said to her "You are going to make yourself sick." She responded with, "This will not... make me sick. I eat this way all the time." And just to prove her amazing stomach strength she went back for seconds! HaHa! (This cracked me up then and since her passing my kids and I talk about this time a lot and still laugh.)

But she's also the girl that showed up to that party hours before to help me set it up, stayed to help clean it all up, and had never once come over where she didn't ask if she could help me or one of the kids do something. I have never heard her speak a negative word about anyone... Ever!

Another funny thing about when she would sleep over is that her and Cecily would share the hide-away bed in the living room. But if one of them got up or turned in the wrong position the whole thing would start to flip the other one still laying on there. Cecily always woke up exhausted the next morning, because Rain would toss and turn in her sleep constantly flipping Cecily's side. But Rain always woke up refreshed. That girl could sleep through anything. :))

Another thing I always loved about her is if she wanted something bad enough she WOULD look at it from all angles to try and figure out how to turn that "no" into a "yes".

We miss that sweet girl so much and grieve with her family and friends through this! We love her dearly! <3
